Dear Joey (31 years old),

Firstly, because you are my nephew and because you haven't yet done anything serious enough to warrant my complete disdain for your self-being and well-being, as others in the Dias clan have done, I'm going to be more civil to you on this topic than I normally would be. Secondly, when someone so flippantly trolls¹ (Be sure to see ALL and EVERY endnote!) me as you have just done, which is often characteristically a favorite pastime and the status quo among Trump supporters, who find that true discourse is far removed from their "high moral value" perceptions, and agreements with the Almighty, I generally take off my gloves and my expletives begin to flow as freely as Facebook will allow. Trumpsters are of a kind who usually profess to serve a Holy alliance with a god they claim to be the one and only All-knowing and All-good and All-gracious God, of a Godly imagery that cannot be questioned, even knowingly well that hell is purported to be of a far larger size than heaven, and even knowingly well that man was made in the image of God, and even knowingly well that it is they who not only break God's laws—accepted in the Holy Book, but do it willingly and often and intentionally so—which is not accepted by the Holy Book, that one can judge them not to be of Christian values, but of an immoral disgrace; I can certainly presume that this is a kind of group in which you truly belong. Such "moral high ground value" games and motives play into this going-to-church, Bible thumper makes me a Christian façade, ironically of being as something righteous, when it in fact IS NOT, but is more of a conduit straight from the depths of the fiery hell you claim is only for bad folk.

So let's get started, shall we? Normally, in any argument, I show respect with others who would like to have civil discourse, but I find that people who want this is not common, and I have yet to find Trumpsters to be mindfully respectful or to be interested in working their rhetorical charm in order to want me to see their side, if not outright convince me to change my mind (I used to whole heartedly support Trump, by the way, but I was never a Trumpster.), as you have implied in your post. Although you seem to have fallen into such a category, I feel compelled to set you straight, as straight as I can muster.

This paper can be viewed as not only an exercise in persuasive dissension, but as an exorcism to ward off demons unbecoming of so-called moral-high-ground-values Christians, and more importantly, to ward off demons who claim to be holding United States Constitutional principles, when they, in fact, DO NOT, but DO, in fact, hold values contrary to both—and please note that herein, every single one of my statements is supported by clear and concise examples, unlike yours. In essence, you are an accomplice to mass murder!

So, let's quote you, yourself:

Just because Trump is with someone doesn't make them friends. In fact, Trump was harder on foreign leaders than any president in recent memory. Friend to none.

The thing about Trump is that if you've been paying attention for the last 8 years... the homework is done. We have a 4-year presidential term (really 3 years) to reference. So don't reference anything about Trump that is outside of that. Because it won't apply.

... Stick to the rules. If you're referencing something Trump might do, you must substantiate it by something done in the first 3 years of his previous term.

I could write a lengthy book to respond to your memes, but somehow I'll have to restrain my composition to be shorter, first and foremost, because your flippant prognosis of this theme automatically closes the door on a proper line of discussion: "... the homework is done," the vagueness in what you do have to say, and the very fact that you haven't read or looked into anything I've said thus far, including the video you commented on; these are all clear signs that you're not interested in the ease and substantive nature—but long nature, that I not only take to both validate that your positions are absurdities, but to refute those absurdities in record speed through the most basics in rhetorical discourse 101.

To continue, it is clear that your respect for me is small or nil, and therefore, for anything I say about the matter will likely fall on deaf ears, muted before the first sound bites are echoed, and not even cursorily read; nevertheless, it is positions like yours that have stimulated my Calling to voice reason where reasoning seems to be void of content. Your pretense for "Moral High Groundⁱⁱ" will be addressed as this writing unfolds, which we will start with your first remarks, as shown above.

Hi, Joey Dias, welcome to my world. My name is Chris Dias, I am a Communications Instructor here in Hungary. I have been teaching Communications since 2002, or thereabouts. I have had students as young as 6 year old twins and as old as 85. I've taught and am teaching a slew of students with a slew of interests: elementary school, high school, college, professionals (CEOs, accountants, software and hardware developers, physicists, English teachers, language oriented professionals, doctors, HR recruiters, lawyers, politicians, in the theater and movie industry, water polo players, pilots and others in the airline industry, individual students and groups—the list is long enough—you get the message), and I've edited works for publishing (i.e., medical papers, legal papers, fictitious books, and websites). As a show of gratitude from one such student, a world renowned doctor in Neurology, with an impeccable record and foresight into moving her field forward, I was recently invited to her habilitation.

I am especially well rehearsed in aiding students in their quest for job searches, and am highly skilled at revamping my students' presentation so that they usually acquire their goals as quickly and as efficiently as practical, which brings me to my first direct response to your flaunting of a very first principle of what Christianity and of what Constitutionality frown upon: "So don't reference anything about Trump that is outside of that. Because it won't apply." I like this word "önéletrajz," in Hungarian and in Latin it's "Curriculum Vitae." The Hungarian version means "autobiography" and the Latin version means "course of one's life," which is the same with a different take. In American English we use the word "resume," which means that piece of paper you give to a potential employer. I like the Hungarian and Latin versions because when you go to look for a job, everything you've done in your life is applicable to your job interview—Everything! So when I'm hiring (setting someone up for successful job searching efforts) we want to know about their first achievements: When did you decide you wanted to be a software developer, and when was the first time you did something related to that? You started to like math when you were 3? Please tell me more. We can often make the case that their stories start early, and is relevant. Of course not every—and maybe even many, employers will ask such questions, but we need to develop a full-picture mosaic. So in essence, this rule of yours where I can only talk about 3 years of Trumpet's 77 years is just one of your many glaring bogus fallacies in your short message above, which invokes a flurry of cans of worms, wrap my head around. This notion that I can't talk about Trump's past from his early years, to the present, to what he says he's going to be doing in the future, is simply preposterous.

I could go on and on about what you wrote in just your few lines, but first and foremost, I teach writing skills, verbal articulation, as well as listening and reading skills, with an appetite for body language. With every single thing you write—not just you, anybody, whether it be something fictitious or something real, the design MUST BE a statement that is followed by clear and concrete examples (or vice versa in some cases). With truth, you have a true statement followed with true and clear facts, and NOT some abstractions that fog my mind, as your lack of effort does. With every storyline, fictitious or not, your statement MUST include clear, vivid, concrete, images. What you have ever written, as far as I can see, and have seen you post over and over again, doesn't even make an effort to be smart or acute with its assertions. "Trumpsters don't even pretend to be smart." – me I can presume that you've acquired some type of schooling, have you not? My God, you sound like a child who can't say anything other than what your headmasters has taught you (The Scientific Outlook, Bertrand Russell, part 3, XIV, Education in a Scientific Society p.251), which is an abstraction of myths and lies, for the most part. The best type of propaganda is a little bit of truth with a whole lot of bullshit. Logic and reason and discourse and history and current events and future predictions based on current and past events and statistics DO matter. So Your "rules"—not mine, not that of what should be of a proper discussion, are mired in unrealities, are delusional (The Twilight Zone [1959-1964]). Even you wouldn't be able to follow your own rules if push comes to shove.

Another thing you said was, "Just because Trump is with someone doesn't make them friends. In fact, Trump was harder on foreign leaders than any president in recent memory. Friend to none." Well, a business person who doesn't have friends, in the practical sense, won't have a very stable business, for sure. What makes a friend, would be the first question. This is certainly one idea that is a most abstract and problematic concept, but let's see what Trump and Orbán say about each other (admittedly most of the following resources are left-wing leaning, but that doesn't make it wrong. Trump, as well as Fox News, are both hardline leftist entities, prove me wrong!):

PM Orbán met Trump on Friday in the former president's Mar-a-Lago residence in Florida. Talks were followed by a dinner and concert. In the video recorded at the concert, Trump said: "No one is better, smarter or a better leader than Viktor Orbán. He's fantastic".

Trumpster Dumpsters are Fraudsters. Tell me where I'm wrong! You say that Trump is a "Friend to none." So, in school, this is a kid who you sometimes befriend to make them feel better because you feel sorry for them. It happened to me in elementary school, putting me on the raw side of the deal. When I found out, that was an instant dissolution of that relationship. "A friend to none"¹ is indicative of a business person and politician who is struggling in their relationships and is by all accounts unsuccessful.ⁱⁱⁱ

You, being a Christian and all ... about promises, well, let's see what the Bible says about promises:

What does the bible say about people keeping promises?

ChatGPT

The Bible contains several teachings and principles related to keeping promises and being faithful to one's word. Here are a few relevant passages:

Numbers 30:2: "When a man vows a vow to the Lord, or swears an oath to bind himself by a pledge, he shall not break his word; he shall do according to all that proceeds out of his mouth."

This verse emphasizes the seriousness of vows and oaths made to the Lord, highlighting the importance of fulfilling one's commitments and promises.

Ecclesiastes 5:4-5: "When you make a vow to God, do not delay to fulfill it. He has no pleasure in fools; fulfill your vow. It is better not to make a vow than to make one and not fulfill it."

This passage underscores the importance of not only making promises but also promptly fulfilling them. It warns against making rash vows or commitments that one cannot keep.

Matthew 5:33-37: In this passage, Jesus teaches about oath-taking and honesty: "Again, you have heard that it was said to the people long ago, 'Do not break your oath, but fulfill to the Lord the vows you have made.' But I tell you, do not swear an oath at all: either by heaven, for it is God's throne; or by the earth, for it is his footstool; or by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the Great King. And do not swear by your head, for you cannot make even one hair white or black. All you need to say is simply 'Yes' or 'No'; anything beyond this comes from the evil one."

Jesus emphasizes the importance of honesty and integrity in communication. Rather than making elaborate oaths, he teaches simplicity and truthfulness in one's speech and actions.

Overall, the Bible encourages believers to be people of integrity, keeping their promises and commitments as an expression of their faithfulness to God and others.

Without your, yours—Joey Dias, commitment, you are NO FRIEND to Jesus. Without just a smidgen of decency and a knowledge of history, you are no friend to the voting booth or to United States Constitutional Conservatism! (By the way, I don't write this stuff for fun, so I hope you take it and evaluate it!) Send the FUCKIN' WEAPONS!

Orbán says that Trump won't send a penny if he's elected! No matter what position you take or which way your swaying, you don't tell your enemies (but then Putin is closer to a friend) what you're going to do.

One of my students, who's a puppet drone of Putler and Viktátorus (Orbán the dictator) said that I'm getting fake news about the Ukrainian—Russian war. So, I have been collecting the links to the vloggers and news outlets. I started with 30 something, and as of today I have listed 75. I have been asking him day and night which ones are lying to me so I can delete them and complain immediately. And like you, he never answered, and then he disappeared—I still send him that question every time I add a new news outlet to my list. If you'd like, I can send it to you or upload it where I upload this document. Study! Study! Study! Every Trumpster and Orbánite I've talked to wants to apply logic without both content and context. Incredible!

I demand of all of my students that every single assertion needs to be supported with clear and decisive examples, not some abstractions that are pulled out of their asses that produce a rancid smell, but of one that is hard to detect of what it is and where it's coming from. Your rules are absurdly insufficient and your comments do nothing but put a heavy fog in my head. So, please, please, please, try it again.

P.S. Trump is as left as they get!! Explain to me then that he's "right-wing"! Hitler left-wing, Orbán, left-wing, Trump, left-wing. Just because everyone says it so, doesn't make it so. I can explain my position in a minute, you cannot explain that in hours! I know, but go ahead and try!

ⁱ Trolling on the internet refers to the act of deliberately provoking, harassing, or antagonizing others online by posting inflammatory, offensive, or misleading comments or content with the intention of eliciting an emotional response or disrupting discussion. Trolls may target individuals or communities across various online platforms such as social media, forums, chat rooms, or comment sections.

The term "trolling" originated from the fishing technique of trolling, where a baited line is dragged through the water to attract fish. In the context of the internet, the term was first used in the early 1990s on online forums and bulletin board systems (BBS). Initially, it referred to behavior aimed at disrupting online discussions, often by posting irrelevant or provocative messages to incite reactions from other users.

Over time, trolling has evolved and become more sophisticated, with trolls using various tactics to provoke emotional responses or sow discord. This behavior can range from harmless pranks to more harmful forms of cyberbullying or harassment. Trolling is often done anonymously or under pseudonyms to conceal the troll's identity and avoid accountability for their actions.

While some trolling may be done for entertainment or to express dissenting opinions, it can have negative consequences, including fostering hostility, spreading misinformation, and causing emotional distress to individuals or communities. Many online platforms have implemented measures to combat trolling, such as community guidelines, content moderation, and user-blocking features, to maintain a safer and more respectful online environment.

ⁱⁱ The term "moral high ground" refers to a position of moral superiority or ethical righteousness that one person or group claims to hold over another. It suggests that the individual or group asserting the moral high ground believes their actions, beliefs, or values are more virtuous, just, or morally correct compared to those of others.

Here's a more detailed explanation:

1. Ethical Superiority: Claiming the moral high ground implies that one's actions or beliefs align with a higher standard of morality or ethics compared to others. This can manifest in various ways, such as adhering strictly to ethical principles, championing noble causes, or upholding values that are considered universally virtuous.
2. Judgment and Criticism: Those who assert the moral high ground may criticize or judge others whose actions or beliefs they perceive as falling short of their own moral standards. This judgment can be explicit or implicit and may be accompanied by condemnation or disdain for perceived moral failings.
3. Conflict and Disagreement: Asserting the moral high ground often occurs in the context of conflict or disagreement, where opposing parties hold divergent views or engage in behaviors that are deemed unethical or immoral by one side. By positioning themselves as morally superior, individuals or groups may seek to delegitimize their opponents' arguments or actions.
4. Rhetorical Strategy: Claiming the moral high ground can also serve as a rhetorical strategy to bolster one's credibility, persuade others to adopt their perspective, or justify their own actions or decisions. By presenting themselves as morally upright, individuals or groups may enhance their perceived authority or legitimacy in the eyes of others.
5. Self-Reflection and Accountability: While asserting the moral high ground can be a means of advocating for positive change or holding others accountable for their actions, it's important for individuals to engage in self-reflection and introspection to ensure they are genuinely acting in accordance with their professed moral values. Hypocrisy or inconsistency can undermine the credibility of claims to the moral high ground.

Overall, the concept of the moral high ground is complex and subjective, influenced by cultural, philosophical, and personal beliefs about morality and ethics. It can be a powerful rhetorical tool in debates and discussions but should be approached with caution and humility, mindful of the potential for bias, judgment, and self-righteousness.

iii friendships in relations to success?

ChatGPT ChatGPT

Friendships can play a significant role in an individual's success in various aspects of life. Here are several ways in which friendships can impact success:

1. Support and Encouragement: Friends can provide emotional support during challenging times, offering encouragement, empathy, and a listening ear. This support can boost confidence and resilience, enabling individuals to navigate obstacles and pursue their goals more effectively.
2. Networking Opportunities: Friendships often extend beyond personal connections and can lead to valuable networking opportunities. Introductions, referrals, and collaborations through friends can open doors to new job opportunities, business ventures, or creative projects.
3. Diverse Perspectives: Friends come from different backgrounds, cultures, and experiences, providing diverse perspectives and insights. These varied viewpoints can spark creativity, broaden understanding, and lead to innovative solutions to problems, contributing to professional success.
4. Skill Development: Friends can share knowledge, skills, and experiences with each other. Whether it's learning a new hobby, honing professional skills, or receiving feedback on projects, friends can act as mentors and teachers, fostering personal and professional growth.
5. Mental Well-being: Strong friendships are linked to improved mental well-being, including lower stress levels, increased happiness, and better overall health. A positive mental state is conducive to productivity, focus, and the ability to handle challenges effectively, all of which contribute to success.
6. Accountability: Friends can hold each other accountable for their goals and commitments. Whether it's staying motivated to exercise regularly, meet deadlines, or pursue career aspirations, having supportive friends who check in and offer accountability can enhance productivity and goal achievement.
7. Celebrating Achievements: Friends celebrate each other's successes, big or small. Sharing accomplishments with friends not only boosts morale but also reinforces a sense of achievement and fulfillment, motivating individuals to continue striving for success.

It's important to cultivate and nurture positive friendships built on mutual respect, trust, and support. Investing time and effort in maintaining meaningful friendships can have long-lasting benefits that contribute to personal and professional success.
