

The Puppet Master Part 5

Czechoslovakia was in real trouble and hungry and there was strife, and a small group of communists managed to gain power in the Czech government through parliamentary maneuvers. That was taking care of the top down pressure. Meanwhile, unbeknownst to all of the people in Czechoslovakia, they were agitating people, getting them out into the streets, riot, strike, protest. Create the illusion of a widespread clamor for change. That was the bottom up pressure from the system. Well, the people were left in between, and they didn't know the truth, they didn't know what was going on. They were hungry, they were scared, they were confused, and they were looking for help. When they cried out for help from the government, which they thought was not with the rioters...oh, they got help. They had no idea that some at the top were in league with those creating the chaos at the bottom.

The people at the top had formed a Shadow Government, and they were only too happy to help, and they helped by clamping down on the Czech people. So, the Czech people were hit from both directions—top down, bottom up, and inside out; their country was turned inside out. They didn't know what to believe.

The same is now being called for. The organizations that are calling out for Obama to bypass congress and issue just executive orders -- the Institute for Policy Studies, Soros funding. They came out with their annual report that literally says, "Outside pressure, and inside strategy." What does that mean? It's just a different way of saying, "Up and down pressure." Same thing, "Outside—Inside."

Now, how do I know about this strategy in Czechoslovakia? Well, it came from Jung Kozak's (sp?) communist strategy paper. He was a writer and a member of the communist party at the time. He wrote this essay, and it was never intended to go public, but it accidentally did. We found it in a very old copy of the Congressional Records.

Everything I have been telling you for the last two nights—all of this, this strategy. All of this, the exposure. Why would you think George Soros sent his number 2 guy to my number 2 guy to ask us to consider him a kindly old gentleman, because what he is doing was never meant to be published. But after being bullied, we stood up. We're not playing your game. It's no accident. This is what Van Jones meant, "Top down, inside out after the bottom up." What the Czech people didn't know is what you know now, that there is an orchestration of the ground. It's all being orchestrated. You know the groups involved now, and you know who's at the top. The Czechoslovakian people didn't know that so they ran to the people they usually trusted, but they called for the wrong people. The other thing that the Czechoslovakian people didn't know is the first lesson of the 9-12 Project. What was my goal when I introduced the 9-12 Project? To tell you that you are not alone. But here's one of the most important lines out of that, especially in retrospect. Listen to this: The truth is, they don't surround us, we surround them, this is our country. Why is that important? Because when you study what happened in Czechoslovakia, the people felt alone, and they felt surrounded. You're not alone, and they do not surround you. It's an illusion, it's a puppet show, it's a stage. The radicals need you to feel that way. They need you to riot; they need you to create chaos. They'll do it, if you won't, but they'd prefer that you did it. So when Van Jones says "bottom up ", he means get out into the streets. Why do you think they're telling the young communists, "They're coming for you." Get out into the streets. It's a game.

And George Soros enjoys the game. He finds it "kind of fun...those subversive activities ", not my words, his words. He means the government forces that are in league with the riots when Van Jones says "bottom up, and top down "; the top will clamp down. Those are the people who are trying to force this president to do what he knows needs to be done. Van Jones's words, "Top-down, bottom-up, inside-out strategy. That's what's happening, except now. Except now we've thrown a tire iron into their little game that they have played four other times, and they are now executing the fifth time, but now we're changing the game. That's why we've tried to arm you with the most powerful weapon you have, the information you need. Find all of this, find it out for yourself. Don't take my word for it. Know it, and tell everyone you know! George Soros, you should know one thing, sir! We are not Czech citizens. We, are Americans!

I wanna take a minute here to show you something that was released by George Soros last night and OSI, his charitable arm, you know, because he's a philanthropist. And to be fair to him, I want to show you what they've rolled out. I want you to know one thing. This guy has collapsed 4 countries, 4 regimes, 4 currencies. He's the most powerful man on the earth, 35th richest man in the world. This is Enron, what you're seeing here is what happens when a company is in collapse. This is a desperate cry. For George Soros to turn around and look at a guy at 5 'oclock in the afternoon... This is coming undone. You spread all of the information we've given you, and you do your own homework. You verify yourself, go to original sources, and verify yourself and spread it, because light is the only thing this guy...he can't stand the light, he has to hide behind a mask. But, watch, their corporate film on.. don't listen to that guy at 5:00, really, I'm a good guy.

"Over the past 3 decades, George Soros, the Founder and Chairman of the Open Society Institutions has spent more than 8 billion dollars transforming the lives of the world's most oppressed and ignored people, by helping those with HIV and TB in Africa, righting centuries of wrongs against Europe's ethnic minority, the Roma, Soros has championed Open Society issues around the globe. What is it that I really care about: democracy, market. These are the institutions that we need for people to be able to improve their conditions in life. His experiences as a child in WWII fueled his drive to combat totalitarianism. In the 1980s, his Open Society Foundations helped topple communism in Eastern Europe, strengthening democracy by supporting education, justice, and freedom of information. Open Society can prevail only when people can speak truth to power. Today, Open Society Foundations are present in more than 70 countries, including the United States. Soros recently gave 50 million dollars to provide food, shelter and clothing to New York's neediest, who were hard hit by the economic crisis. The foundation work to build vibrant and tolerant democracies whose governments are accountable to their citizens. That is fantastic. That is fantastic, and don't forget he's given all that money, you know, just to help ... just love it... this is only half the organizations that are helping him accomplish his new spooky world order. That's it.

There are really two ways to look at what I do everyday here. You can either say, as my critiques say that I'm a fear monger, or you can say that I am empowering you with information. I hate the fact that some people believe that I'm a fear monger. I just say what I believe. That's what I do, and I believe that things are coming. I believe that we can get passed them, but we have to be prepared. I've told you over and over again, I hope I'm wrong. But FDR (Franklin D. Roosevelt) was wrong when he said, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself. " The only thing we have to fear is not being prepared, and not knowing what's really happening. But progressives, progressives will say I'm a fear monger, and they want you to believe that everything is fine, and that's what they'll tell you. Watch!

"This is a rich country. We have plenty of money, and if you don't believe me, ask our Obama. We've been able to create or same 3.5 million jobs. Will the Federal Reserve monetize this debt? The Federal Reserve will not monetize the debt. Our legislation, according to the economists, has saved or created 3.6 million jobs. We have turned this economy around. I think that we see entities that are fundamentally sound financially, and will stand some of the disasters and (??)."

K. You can believe that, and I hope they're right, they're not, but I hope they're right. You know better, you know the truth. You know, on jobs. Really? Unemployment rate unchanged, 9.6% last night. They said it would never go past 8. Food prices are rising. You don't believe me, go shopping. Walstreet Journal now says an inflationary tide is beginning to ripple through the supermarkets and the restaurants. They're still telling you they're worried about deflation. Oh don't worry about inflation. Check the price of gas. We're not gonna monetize the debt; that was under oath. Really? The Fed just said that they will print more money to buy as much treasury debt in the next 8 months, as the government will issue. Fanny and Freddy, Barney Frank (the fat stupid Democrat you just saw) – together they now have twice as many foreclosed homes as they did this time last year.

America, we have a historic choice in front of us. Do we open our eyes, do we keep bearing our heads in the sand? Do we end the book called "America ", or do we just turn the page and begin a new chapter. I told you the 40 day and 40 night challenge. Please take this. People, we can't be the people who are angry. We can't be those people. They got that covered. We have to be the people who say, "Thank goodness you're here." We have to be the ones who count on "faith, hope, and charity " from each other. From each other. We don't need a billionaire to activate it. We activate it in ourselves. Please share all of this with your friends. A little more on the Puppet Master on tomorrow's show, and then on Friday we're gonna change the mood a bit. We're gonna talk about gratitude with an incredible audience. You do not want to miss Friday, from New York.
